December 2017

Welcome

From our Chairman of Partners

Welcome to the fourth edition of McRConnect.

It's hard to believe we have come to the end of yet another year. Catching up with many of you at our recent annual cocktail event, I know I'm not alone when I wonder where the months have gone.

2017 has been an exciting and busy year for the McR team. In October we welcomed four new partners to our Sydney office. Jason, Scarlet, Ben and Matthew are all leading Sydney lawyers and former partners of Henry Davis York. Joining us with five senior members of their team, our new partners are recognised experts in their respective fields and will bolster our national presence and growing brand on the east coast. Find out more about our new partners on Page 7.

October also saw the launch of our annual Living our Purpose Awards, which forms part of the work we have done over the past year to make McR an even better place to work. Our inaugural award winners are well-deserving, helping to bring our purpose to life in their everyday work and demonstrating the qualities that help others to do the same. Learn more about our award winners on Page 6.

In November we launched our new website and our inaugural community partnership report – both long-term projects involving numerous people and teams across McR. Our new website features a fresh and contemporary design as well as significantly improved functionality. The site translates to tablets and mobiles and importantly, features a dedicated page for our alumni colleagues. Our community partnership report is an equally exciting initiative, bringing to life the work we have done to create lasting change in the areas of our community that need it most. You can read more about these key projects on Pages 6 and 11.

Finally, as a recognised specialist, I encourage you to read Ian Hazzard's insights to trends and opportunities in the tourism sector on Page 10.

For now, I wish you and your family a safe and happy festive season. I look forward to seeing you at our events in 2018.

All the best,

Dominic McGann

This Christmas we are again proud to support Anglicare, Working Against Violence Support Services, Barnardos, Leukaemia Foundation and Make-A-Wish Australia.

From Louise

Our alumni champion

I share Dom's sentiment in wondering where this year has gone! Certainly 2017 has been a big year for our alumni program as our calendar of events and membership base has continued to gather momentum. Last month I celebrated my 10 year anniversary with McR and took the opportunity to reflect on my journey from both a personal and professional perspective. Undoubtedly what stood out to me the most were my colleagues, past and present, and the friendships and connections I have forged at McR over the years. It's because of these important relationships that I'm so grateful for the opportunity to champion our alumni program.

In this vein, it was wonderful to see so many of you at our recent cocktail event. As promised, you will find lots of happy snaps from the night in this issue as well as through our LinkedIn group. And, speaking of McR milestones, in this issue we pay tribute to many more of our long-term McR colleagues. The fact that we currently have 95 people (more than a quarter of our firm) who have been with us for more than 10 years truly is testament to our people first, 'down to earth' culture.

Finally, on Pages 12 and 13 we catch up with our former colleagues Nicole Choolun and James Macaulay who are enjoying exciting new adventures.

Our new website is here

We're excited to announce that our new website is now live! Our refreshed site has a clean, uncluttered design and is easy to navigate, with dropdown menus for both mobile and desktop versions. We have also refined and reduced the site's content to make it easier for our stakeholders to find essential information related to our people, our experience and our knowledge.

Over the coming months the site will be further enhanced to include more people profiles, including our senior associates, special counsel and strategic advisers as well as additional articles and publications providing valuable insights aligned to the industries we work in. Finally, make sure you visit our new alumni page, which features our past newsletters and photos from our key events.

We hope you like the changes. Click here to enjoy the new site and please let us know what you think by emailing bdm@mccullough.com.au

Living our purpose

Congratulations to the inaugural winners of our Living our Purpose Awards – Liam Davis, Melissa Davidson, Nicholas Lindsay, Nicole Watson, Kara Meziniec and David Gilham. These deserving recipients are brand ambassadors for McR who inspire a culture of quality, exhibit excellence in client service and operate with courage, respect and integrity. We acknowledge all our award nominees who made it a difficult process to select winners from the many extraordinary people we are fortunate to have as colleagues.

Building our east coast brand

We are pleased to introduce our four new Sydney partners. Jason, Scarlet, Ben and Matthew started with us during October and November and have all settled in nicely, working together with our broader east coast team to enhance our offering to clients.

Jason Munstermann
Partner, Litigation and Dispute Resolution

Jason is recognised as a dispute resolution expert with more than 20 years experience as a specialist commercial litigator. He uses broad strategies to achieve fair and reasonable outcomes. Jason acts for some of Australia's largest companies across government, financial, property, mining, insurance and telecommunications. Jason grew up in a small coastal town with no traffic lights or fast food. He and his family enjoy surfing, snowboarding and fly-fishing.

Scarlet Reid
Partner, Employment Relations and Safety

Scarlet's expertise in employment and safety is widely recognised across private and public sectors advising large Australian corporations and government agencies. Additionally, she provides support to clients being investigated for breaches of safety laws, including investigations into workplace incidents and representation at coronial inquests. Scarlett is an avid skier, and has recently skied at Jackson Hole, Wyoming. She hopes to return to ski the Corbet's Couloir, rated number 1 in "the World's 13 Most Dangerous Ski Runs". We look forward to her joining the McR LawSki team in 2018.

Ben Mortimer
Partner, Corporate Advisory

Ben specialises in mergers and acquisitions, divestments, joint ventures, strategic commercial arrangements, corporate restructures, and complex service and supply arrangements. He acts for both Australian and international clients, particularly in the financial services sector including as an adviser to leading financial institutions and the Big Four banks. Ben enjoys spending time with his young family either surfing, swimming or skiing.

Matthew McMillan
Partner, Intellectual Property and Competition

Matt specialises in technology and communications, IP and privacy/data protection. His expertise includes complex ICT procurement arrangements, large-scale outsourcing and managed services initiatives, systems development and integration projects. He also advises in relation to big data and analytics projects, and data breach and cyber risk issues. Matt enjoys time with his children, travelling, skiing and the occasional session on the guitar.

We also welcome five new special counsel and senior associates to our Sydney office:

Nathan Roberts – Senior Associate, Employment Relations and Safety

Tom Reaburn – Senior Associate, Employment Relations and Safety

Chris Nielsen – Senior Associate, Litigation and Dispute Resolution

Jasmine Luczak – Special Counsel, Corporate Advisory

Lisselle Lomax – Senior Associate, Corporate Advisory

McColour

McColour
A McCullough Robertson diversity initiative

We officially launched the McColour initiative on 1 September 2017 to align with Brisbane Pride Month. This launch attracted an overwhelming response with more than 80 employees expressing interest in getting involved. McColour is part of the Diversity and Inclusion strategy for the firm which is supported by the Diversity Initiatives Committee. The initiative is an LGBTI focused inclusion program.

The McR Ally Network is a network of LGBTI and Non-LGBTI staff members who support the McColour committee to align firm activities with the inclusion and diversity strategy allowing LGBTI employees to bring their whole self to work and supporting the community to create an environment where staff do not feel disadvantaged or isolated.

Recognition in launching McColour must go to our sub-committee, Ian Hazzard and David Gilham (Partner Champions), Christian Baldock, Emile McPhee, Chris Saxby and Michael Bidwell.

McR Milestones

In this edition of McRConnect we feature a selection of our colleagues who have recently celebrated milestone anniversaries, acknowledging their achievements and contribution to our firm over many years.

Don Palmer

Consultant, 45 years

Don Palmer joined McR in 1972. He practiced in corporate, commercial, resources, real estate and pastoral, before the firm commenced specialisations in 1988. His expertise and experience across most specialties, particularly real estate, Don continues to be highly valued at McR. Don is well known as one of the best and most accurate draftsman in the profession as well as his role as a mentor to junior lawyers. Don's timeliness is also second to none, meticulously setting self imposed deadlines for matters to assist with smooth handling from start to finish.

"I've had the pleasure of working with Don for the lion's share of my career and have thoroughly enjoyed the experience. Don provides dynamic, lateral thinking and often, a fond story or two!" - Ian Hazzard, Partner

Donna White

Events Coordinator, 40 years

Donna White (then Donna Bonnell, or 'DB' as she was affectionately known) started at McR as a secretary in 1977. In the forty years since, Donna has given continuous, dedicated and forever good hearted service. In due course, Donna would also be a WP Supervisor and the PA for Brett Heading and Dominic McGann before moving into Business Development and Marketing. As Events Coordinator Donna capably manages all aspects of our many events as well as our in-house café Nosh.

"At McR we emphasise the importance of culture and, to my mind, Donna is the living embodiment of a committed, caring and generous colleague who always gives more of herself than she asks of others." - Dominic McGann, Chairman

Damien Clarke

Partner, 30 years

Damien Clarke started at McR as a lawyer in 1987 working in the corporate group. He started his career as a tax and stamp duty lawyer before broadening his practice to include commercial law, and in particular a focus on the burgeoning resources industry in Queensland.

"Damien has been a mentor, teacher and friend to generations of lawyers who have been fortunate to come under his tutelage and has been instrumental in the integration of flexible work practices at McR". - Peter Williams, Partner

Peter Stewart

Partner, 25 years

Peter Stewart started at McR as a senior associate in the finance team in 1992 and was promoted to Partner in 1994. A born leader, Peter has held many senior roles at McR from practice group and business unit leader, stints on the Executive and as interim Chairman and Managing Partner. His background in the family business is reflected in the long-standing relationships he shares with clients, many of whom seek his counsel as a trusted partner. Those who know Peter appreciate his sense of humour and never grow tired of his collection of funny stories or colourful golfing vests.

"Whether advising a major bank lender or an SME borrower, Peter treats every business as though it's his own and has developed a reputation for providing empathetic, commercial and pragmatic advice." - Kirby Jukes, Partner

Tourism industry to take over as growth engine of economy

A deliberate focus on the growth potential of international tourism is fuelling opportunities for hotel and leisure operators across the country.

Australia, as an international tourist destination, has grown to unprecedented heights. According to Austrade, we welcomed 7.9 million international visitors in the 2017 financial year, a nine percent increase on the previous year. Similarly, visitor spend hit $40 billion, up seven percent on the previous year.

As a country, we are doing well to secure our share of Asia's growing middle class. China is our biggest customer with both visitor numbers and trip spend increasing 10 percent to reach $1.2 million and $9.8 billion in 2017, respectively. As urbanisation and average household incomes continue to grow in China, so too does the trend toward long haul overseas travel.

Recently China Southern Airlines, the world's fifth largest airline, announced significant capacity growth in its Australian operations, up 10 per cent annually for the next five to eight years. Increasing capacity that much would bring hundreds of thousands of additional Chinese visitors to Australia.

The opportunity for operators to cater to the growing number of Asian tourists seeking immersive and adventure travel experiences is particularly compelling. Our regions, in particular, are famous for their unmatched natural beauty, wildlife and cultural offerings and operators need to ensure they capitalise on these attributes by promoting high value, connected and distinct experiences that showcase the best of our country.

The Millennial market represents another opportunity for hotel and tourism operators. Millennials represent a rapidly growing segment in the market in terms of visitor numbers and spend and hoteliers, in particular, would be amiss to ignore this market's unique requirements in terms of hotel design and functionality.

The younger market often travel independently so there is increased demand for smaller rooms with engaging communal areas, personal device connectivity rather than in-room technology and enhanced digital offerings such as Instagram-friendly design features to a streamlined booking and enquiry process.

This speaks to the disruption in the industry more broadly. Over the next decade, digitalisation in aviation, travel and tourism is expected to create up to $300 billion in value for the global industry. Digital innovation, connected devices and artificial intelligence will provide opportunities to make tourism offerings and operations more effective, and enable collaboration and asset-sharing between enterprises.

As government and industry increasingly turn to travel and tourism as the new growth engine of our economy, a major focus area will be improved transport connectivity and a greater offering of major events, as important drivers to attract our share of travellers.

Our specialist tourism team

Our specialist tourism team works for Australian and international clients well versed in the tourism industry and the myriad of opportunities. We are excited about the potential for our clients and our team to be involved in many more transformative projects as tourism and travel continues to gain significant momentum as one of the cornerstones of our economy.

About Ian Hazzard

Ian leads our Tourism Industry Group and is renowned for his sharp knowledge and passion for the industry. His property development experience includes commercial, industrial, major retail, residential and tourism ventures such as hotels, resorts and marinas. His clients appreciate his commercial approach, which ensures matters are dealt with without prolonged negotiations. He acts for developers large and small, and specialises in master planned and integrated communities and resort developments. Ian has been with the firm for 32 years and a partner for 26.

Community

At McR we have a strong community focus and recognise that it's not always about business. In 2009 we established the McCullough Robertson Foundation to support and formalise our engagement with our community partners. Today we work closely with more than 120 community partners, organisations and charities across a range of areas.

Community Partnership Report 2017

We are delighted to share with you our inaugural community partnership report. As you know, we have a long history of partnering with the communities in which we live and work – giving our talent, our time and our resources to the people and organisations that make a real difference in our community. Our community partnership report brings to life the depth and breadth of the relationships we have built, the work we have done and, importantly, the impact we've made, creating lasting change in the areas of our community that need it most. The stories in this report are testament to the very generous spirit and commitment of our people. We hope you enjoy them.

2017 Delegation to Thursday Island.

Yarning Up in the Torres Strait

Dominic enthusiastically accepted Bond University's invitation to join a small contingent of business and educational leaders for a five-day visit to Mer and Thursday Islands in the Torres Strait as part of its 2017 Yarning Up project. While Dominic is no stranger to life in Indigenous communities – his 30-year career taking him to some of Australia's most remote townships, he had not had the privilege of visiting Mer Island. He described the opportunity as the pinnacle of his personal and professional life – "one of those rare experiences that puts context around everything you have done," he added.

"Sharing knowledge through community engagement and participation are essential factors for social change. Yarning Up enables us to approach the community with particular perspectives and skillsets, which provides direction and a better sense of what more we can do."

Dominic also formed part of the 2016 Yarning Up delegation, travelling to the Far North Queensland township of Lockhart River.

This year we have continued our tradition of bringing Christmas joy to some of our community's most vulnerable. Again our people showed such generosity through our giving tree initiatives in Brisbane, Sydney and Newcastle – buying and wrapping gifts and making donations for kids and families who have had a very tough year.

Nicole Choolun

Started at McR...

in 2012 as a graduate in Real Estate

in June 2015 to pursue a career in entertainment law

Now works at...

Special Broadcasting Service (SBS) as legal counsel in their Sydney office

Tough Mudder 2015

SBS nominated In-house team at Lawyers Weekly Awards 2017

Commencing her career with McR as a vacation clerk, Nicole says she always felt welcome and valued. So when it came time to apply for graduate positions, McR was high on her list. Nicole was offered her graduate position in 2011, which McR kindly allowed her to defer for 12 months to teach English to primary school kids in Carcassonne in the south of France.

Back in Australia, Nicole commenced her grad program in our Real Estate team, working alongside her supervisor, Senior Associate Michelle Leong, who she describes as lovely, patient and diligent. Her second rotation took her to Corporate Advisory where she worked with Senior Associate Ben Wood and (now McR Partner) Aaron Dahl. Nicole fondly recalls their wicked sense of humour, encouragement and support.

The McR corporate team was a great group to work with; they could always see the humour in things regardless of how intense or stressful the situation.

While at McR Nicole wrote film reviews for our internal newsletter and got a real buzz out of the interest shown by her colleagues. From her very first visit to the movies at aged six when she saw the iconic Strictly Ballroom, Nicole had been enthralled by the silver screen. She completed an Arts Honours degree in film and television while studying law and was invited to the Cannes Film Festival while living in France.

So when the opportunity to join Sydney media and entertainment law firm Simpsons Solicitors came up, Nicole jumped at the chance. She was soon putting her legal skills and industry knowledge to work with a range of creative people including musicians and film and television producers. Later that year Nicole took up her current role as an in-house lawyer at Special Broadcasting Service (SBS). With its focus on promoting multilingual and multicultural Australia, SBS was a perfect fit for Nicole having grown up in a Mauritian-South African household. She says her McR experience, having worked across multiple practice groups, stood her in excellent stead for in-house work.

At SBS Nicole has enjoyed working 'on the ground' in the business, which has included involvement in the network's wider strategic and commercial discussions such as bringing Eurovision to Australasia (keep an eye out for this in 2018!). She always gets a buzz out of seeing shows she works on make it to screen. Recently this has included Sunshine, a drama series about the South Sudanese community and basketball, and Filthy Rich and Homeless, a three-part series documenting a social experiment in which five wealthy participants swap privilege for poverty.

Marching with SBS in this year's Mardi Gras was a personal highlight for Nicole as a meaningful way to support her LGBTI friends and family. An avid supporter of diversity and inclusion in the workplace, Nicole is now in the process of contributing to SBS's employee screening panel to help decide on its 2018 'Sexuality' season of programming.

Nicole cites Tough Mudder 2015 as her most memorable McR moment. Nicole joined her husband and a team of 30 McR colleagues to compete in the gruelling challenge and vividly remembers emerging from the ice bath and Partner Kristan Conlon hauling people out of the barbed wire obstacle.

Nicole advises those starting out in law to keep an open mind. With many possible avenues to pursue, she recommends building a solid foundation of broad-based experience, preferably with a full-service firm. She also emphasises the importance of understanding your clients' industries, which she says hugely enhances the practical utility of your advice as well as your own fulfilment as a practitioner.

Outside of her career, Nicole indulges her passion for sport, running and playing netball with her SBS colleagues. As a former national athletics champion, Nicole can't wait to cheer on her sister in law at next year's Commonwealth Games.

Mardi Gras 2017

James Macaulay

Started at McR...

in 2003 as a graduate in Litigation

Left McR...

in November 2005 for a career in finance

Now works at...

Morgans Financial as Private Client Adviser in their Brisbane office

Born and bred in Rockhampton, James hails from a stockbroking family whose dinner table conversation revolved around picking stocks and investments. As a graduate lawyer, McR was a perfect fit for James with a strong corporate practice and opportunities to work on IPOs and capital market transactions. He managed to score an interview through his mother's cousin (former Partner and now Consultant Tim Whitney) and cleverly positioned his experience as a jackaroo to align with the firm's roots as a pastoral practice.

Commencing in McR's litigation team with Partner David Searles (now Judge Searles) James worked alongside fellow alumni Jo Chappel and Toby Boys. But it was in his second rotation in our corporate team that he found his passion, working on IPOs and other capital markets transactions. During this time he worked with Alumni Brett Heading and Julie Withey and Partners Reece Walker and Jim Peterson, returning at the end of his graduate rotations.

James enjoyed his time as a graduate and said the program is a terrific training ground, teaching lawyers attention to detail and due diligence skills that will stand them well in their careers. For James this bond has strengthened a strong loyalty back to McR.

It was his love of investing and the stock market that saw James leave McR as he wanted to be involved in the market side of the transactions he had been working on at McR. His former McR colleagues may remember he was always handing out stock tips as a graduate, but hopes his quality of advice has since improved.

James spent eleven years in the Corporate Finance team at Morgans and was involved with the IPO of more than 50 companies during that time as well as a long list of secondary market transactions. He notes that every second deal he worked on was with McR allowing him to keep strong bonds with our corporate team.

Father and Son trip to Berkshire Hathaway AGM

While working closely with some great entrepreneurs and business leaders to list their companies on the stock exchange was extremely rewarding, over the last 4-5 years James became more interested in the investing side of the business. In particular, he values the trusted relationship of managing someone's wealth (and of course making money for his clients).

Recent company site visit to Wagners

Doing his own research on companies is a key part of his new role, so he tries to dedicate a few days each month to meeting with companies and their management teams in the hope of uncovering a hidden gem for his clients. In recent years, he has also become a regular attendee at the Berkshire Hathaway AGM (Warren Buffet), known as "Woodstock for capitalists".

James' lasting impression of McR, after now sitting across the transaction table from his former colleagues, is that we are willing to go the extra mile and focus on getting results for our clients. He fondly remembers our strong culture and the great friendships he forged.

Outside of work, James and his wife Alana spend their free time with their three boys, Hugo (8), Harry (5) and Archie (3) often at rugby, cricket or swimming.
